

THE BRITISH COLONIST.
Wednesday Morning, November 14, 1866
TO ADVERTISERS.
Transient Advertisements must be paid for in advance.
TO AGENTS
Settlements of accounts will be required monthly, or supply of papers will be discontinued. The daily and weekly issues will be furnished at the lowest rates, and no exception will be made in future to this rule.
THE BRITISH COLONIST IS THE ONLY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COLONY THAT RECEIVES TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCHES.

American Affairs.
The result of the late elections in the East point to an overwhelming rejection of Mr Johnson's reconstruction policy, and indicate that the change wrought in the minds of the North by the war is permanent and inflexible. With but two exceptions, the States in which elections have been held since the 1st inst. have sustained Congress. New York, with the largest Congressional delegation in the Union, sends only 11 Johnson men to 20 Radicals, and elects a Radical Governor by 8,000 or 10,000 majority. Michigan rolls up a Radical majority of 23,000. Missouri (a border slave State before the war broke out) sends greeting to the loyal North with a majority of 18,000 for Congress. In Illinois the Radical Congressman heads the Democratic candidate by 40,000. In Minnesota and Kansas the Republicans have swept the States. In Massachusetts, the Radical Governor is sent into office with a majority of 75,000, and two colored men—the first to enjoy the distinguished honor in the country—are sent to the State Legislature. Delaware and Maryland—two border States in which slavery died hard—have also supported the President's policy; and a careful estimate of the elections in nineteen States show a net Republican gain of four members of Congress. The Republican majority in the Lower House of Congress, so far as known, is ninety-eight; and seven States that have yet to hold elections for thirty representatives cannot alter the result, even were they to elect all Democrats—a result not at all likely to happen. The ten Southern States that have declined to accept the Constitutional amendment, may now be induced to do so—for certainly they can gain nothing by remaining as at present without a voice in the National Councils. This amendment provides that representation shall be based upon the number of voters in a State, and not upon the number of its population. We will take the State of Virginia, for instance, and suppose that she has 600,000 inhabitants, and that half of that number are black. These blacks cannot vote without the consent of the State in which they reside. According to the United States Constitution, representation has hitherto been based upon population, and Virginia would be entitled to one Congressman for every 100,000 inhabitants. The Constitutional amendment, however, as we have already stated, provides that representation shall be based upon the number of actual voters instead of upon the number of inhabitants. Therefore, until Virginia opens the door to Universal Suffrage she will have only three Congressmen to represent her instead of six, as heretofore; and until she accepts the Constitutional amendment, she will have no representation whatever. One only of the Southern States, Tennessee, has accepted the amendment; but the result of the recent elections must convince the Southerners that if they hope for any favors at the hands of their Northern brethren they must acquiesce in the proposed arrangement, and either suffer the negro to vote or be content to put up with a small and ineffective delegation. Should the former alternative be adopted—and its adoption is only a question of time—there are districts in which the preponderating influence of the freedmen will ensure the return of representatives of their own race, and the world will soon witness the anomaly of former slaves legislating for the section of country in which but five years ago they were bought and sold as "chattels." Strange events are recorded in the history of the world; but could there be any event more strange or startling than this wonderful change which all the legislation of the South or all the efforts of Mr. Johnson and his advisers cannot long delay? The State of Massachusetts commenced the anti-slavery agitation thirty-six years ago, and at the late elections she inaugurated the system of sending black men to the Legislature. Next year she will send black men to Congress, and, should the millions of negroes in the South be endowed with the privilege of the franchise, there will soon be nothing to prevent a native born black man from attaining to the highest office within the gift of the people of the United States. Great changes have taken place in America within the past five years; but the future is pregnant with changes in comparison with which those just made will seem insignificant. The South must bow her neck to the yoke which the North has prepared for it. President Johnson and his friends might as well attempt to stop the wheels of time as to attempt to stem the tide of popular sentiment which, right or wrong, has lately rolled towards them, and now threatens to overwhelm and sweep away all and every barrier raised to prevent its flow. There is nothing left for the South but entire and complete submission, and President Johnson, having appealed in vain from Congress to the country, must accept the will of the majority for his future policy, and proceed to administer the laws as Congress may direct. Mr Johnson may possess the wisdom to fall in with the views of the North, and prepare to enforce their demands; but a sense of the duty his conscience teaches him he owes to the whole Union may impel him to insist that the Constitution of the country shall not be amended without the consent of three-fourths in number of all the States composing the Union. This course is the only one that can be constitutionally followed. It was adopted before the slaves were legally free, although they were declared free by Mr Lincoln in his Emancipation Proclamation, as an "act of military necessity," two years previously. There can be no doubt that Mr Johnson has constitutional law and precedent to support him; but the people are against him, and their will overrides all law and precedent. He must either quietly bow to their decision or prepare for another "American conflict," in which he can have not the slightest hope of success.

By Electric Telegraph
SPECIAL TO THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES

Canada.
CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The Court at Toronto yesterday condemned the Fenian, William Hayden, to be hanged on the 13th of December. Drummond was acquitted and two cases postponed. There is an increasing number of suspicious persons in Toronto.

Europe.
CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—A Berlin despatch of the 7th, by the cable, says Prussia agrees in the appointment of Beust as the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs. An attempt to interfere with the question is considered settled. If this view be correct it will only impel Prussia to more quickly complete her national work in Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Morning Herald says the mission of Gladstone to Rome is to reconcile the people to their fate. The rumor of the failure of the Russo-Prussian alliance is unfounded.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—The Czarovich and Princess Dagmar were married yesterday with great festivities.

Eastern States.
The World of this morning has a long article saying the unfortunate results of the elections deprive President Johnson of what ought to have been the chief glory of his administration: the pacification of the country, powerless during the residue of his term in all contested questions of domestic policy. His only chance of acquiring prestige is a vigorous foreign policy, perfectly suited to the control of Congress. It would be futile for him to contend longer with the Radicals in respect to the South, and he will best consult the dignity of his office by letting his action cease with his responsibility.

The Great Republic, pioneer steamship of the San Francisco, China and Japan line, was launched to-day. She is the largest wooden steamer ever built in the United States.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10.—Governor Swan was called upon at his residence last night by a large body of Conservatives, and made a speech congratulating them on the victory obtained. He said the question of the Police Commissioners would not be settled by the Courts, and whoever that Judge was he would be held to strict account for his action.

The retail dealers held another meeting last evening, when the committee appointed at a previous meeting reported that all but two of the wholesale dry goods dealers, one fancy goods dealer, and four wholesale grocers had pledged themselves not to sell goods at retail. The retail dealers express a determination to patronize only those who agree not to interfere with their business by selling at retail.

California.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Arrived, Nov. 11.—Whaling bark Alpha, 22 days from Fox Islands; bark Torment, 17 days from Tokeas; bark Kutusoff, 13 days from Bellingham Bay; bark Scotland, 15 days from Musquady; brig Kentucky, 14 days from Kodiak.

MARKETS.
Flour—Superfine, half sacks, per 196 lbs., $5 75; $6; or sacks, $6 @ 25; extra, half sacks, $6 25 @ 60; quarter sacks, $6 50 @ 65.
The wheat market is rather quiet, parties wishing to realize for the steamer are content with moderate offers. During the last few days about 150,000 sks have been purchased in the interior for this market.
The barley market shows a little improvement. Choice brewing, 97½c; old do, $1 per 100 lb.
Oats—Some inquiry, with small sales at $1 35 @ 45 per 100 lb. for light to good.
Potatoes, 90c; sweet quoted at $1 @ 1 10.

JOHN H. SIKKAT, the principal confederate of Booth in the assassination of Lincoln, is now living in a friendly European country, and Secretary Seward knows of his whereabouts. At least Geo S. Boutwell said so in a speech at Marlborough, Mass.

Canada and the Canadians.
The following are some extracts from Thoreau's book on Canada:
The first impulse, when arrived at Montreal, is to visit the church of Notre Dame, the largest church edifice on this continent. It thus gives his impressions of the worshippers:
"Presently came in a troop of Canadians, in a boat with us, who had come to the city in a boat with us, and one and all knelt down in the aisle before the high altar to their devotions, somewhat awkwardly, as cattle prepare to lie down, and then we left them, as if you were to catch some farm-ers' sons from Marlboro, come to cattle show, silently kneeling in Concord meeting-house, some Wednesday! Would there not soon be a crowd peeping in at the windows? It is true these Roman Catholics, priests, and all, impress me as a people who have fallen far behind the significance of their symbols. It is as if an ox had strayed into a church and was trying to bethink himself. Nevertheless they are capable of reverence; but we Yankees are a people in whom this sentiment has nearly died out, and in this respect we cannot but think ourselves even as an ox."

Of Quebec, he says:
"The founders of the colony thought this an excellent site for a wall—and, no doubt, it was a better site in some respects for a wall than a city, but it chanced that a city got behind it. It chanced, too, that a Lyster Town got before it, and elung like an oyster to the outside of the crags, as you may see at low tide. It is as if you were to come to a country village surrounded by palisades in the old Indian fashion—interesting only as a relic of antiquity and barbarism. A fortified town is like a man cased in the heavy armor of antiquity, with a horse-load of broadsword and small arms slung to him, endeavoring to go about his business."

The rural old French names pleased his fancy. He says:
"I began to dream of Provence and the Troubadours, and of places and things which have no existence on the earth. They veiled the Indian and the primitive forest, and the woods toward Hudson Bay were only as the forests of France and Germany. I could not at once bring myself to believe that the inhabitants who pronounced daily those beautiful and to me significant names, lead as prosaic lives as we in New England. In short, I could not see that I saw was not merely a place for railroads to terminate in and for criminals to run to."

He finds that the farm-houses have, properly speaking, no front doors, and thus philosophizes:
"Every New England house, on the contrary, has a front and principal door opening to the great world, though it may be on the cold side, for it stands on the highway of nations, and the road which runs by it comes from the Old World and goes to the far West; but the Canadian's door opens into the back-yard and farm alone, and the road which leads behind his house leads only from the church of one saint to that of another."

He says of these rural Canadians:
"They have no money invested in railroad stocks, and probably never will have. If they have got a French phrase for a railroad, it is as much as you can expect of them. They are very far from a revolution; have no quarrel with church or state, but their vice and their virtue is content. As for annexation, they have never dreamed of it; indeed, they have not a clear idea of what or where the States are. The English Government has been remarkably liberal to its Catholic subjects in Canada, permitting them to wear their iron letters, both political and religious, as far as was possible for subjects. Their Government is even too good for them."

A Story of Wonderful Discoveries.
An English civil engineer named Johnson, has recently visited Khotan in Chinese Turkistan, and according to the Post, reports:

1. The fertility of the country is increased by a fine, impalpable dust or mould which is wafted in from the adjacent deserts. "Without wind, in perfect calm, and fills the air so as to darken it." The phenomenon occurred during Mr Johnson's visit, and he was then unable to read print at noon without a candle. It is not explained how the dust is blown without a wind, but Mr Johnson says it is "wafted in a calm," and he cannot be contradicted.

2. The storms in the desert raise waves of sand which settle into hills three hundred to four hundred feet high. Why not one thousand feet?

3. The tradition of the country is that three hundred and sixty cities were overwhelmed in one day by sand-storms. The cities of these cities are partially known; so there is a vast array of Pompeii and Nineveh awaiting somebody's pick axe, shovel and archaeological skill.

4. The people of these buried towns used gold coins weighing four pounds each—but "this is kept a profound secret by those who know the position."

5. "The store of tea used for the actual consumption of the people is now dug out of one of these buried cities," and Mr Johnson brought a brick of this tea away with him. "The Chinese supply is now cut off," so the Chinese cut off their supply from these bricks.

We are further informed that the country in which these wonderful things happened is highly auriferous—a remark which is perhaps unnecessary when we remember the four-pound gold coins which seem to have been the circulating medium.
THEIR TOUCHING INCIDENT.—A young man and his wife were preparing to attend a Christmas party at the house of a friend, some miles distant. "Henry, my dear husband, don't drink too much at the party to-day; you will promise me, won't you?" said she, putting her hand upon his brow, and raising her eyes to his face with a pleading smile. "No, Millie, I will not; you may trust me," and she wrapped her infant in a soft blanket and they descended. The horses were soon prancing over the turf, and a pleasant conversation beguiled the way. "Now, don't forget your promise," whispered the young wife, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed up the steps. Poor thing! she was the wife of a man who loved to look upon the wine when red. The party passed pleasantly; the time for departure drew near; the wife descended from the upper chamber to join her husband. A pang shot through her beating heart as she met him, for he was intoxicated; he had broken his promise. Silently they rode homeward, as when the drunken man broke into snatches of a song, or unmeaning laughter. But the wife rode on, her face pressed closely to her grieved heart. "Give me the baby, Millie; I can't trust you with him," he said as they approached a dark and swollen stream. After some hesitation she resigned her first-born—her darling babe closely wrapped in a warm blanket—to his hands, as they passed

THE BRITISH COLONIST.

Wednesday Morning, November 14, 1866

PUGET SOUND SHIPPING.

PORT ANGELES, W. T., Nov. 9, 1866.

Shipping Intelligence

PORT OF VICTORIA, VANCOUVER ISLAND

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

Nov 12—Stmr Josie McNear, Winsor, Port Angeles

AFTERNOON PERFORMANCE.—All good little boys and girls are expected to attend at the Theatre this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, when a grand entertainment will be given for the special benefit of the "rising generation" by the Bell Ringers. To enable all to come the price of admission has been reduced to 25 cents.

KEYWOOD'S PORK SAUSAGE.—Elixer of Life—Mr Heywood of the Yorkshire Market has commenced for the season to make his Celebrated Pork Sausage, manufactured from the very best of Island food pork. Every body buys them because they are good and only Twenty-Five Cents per pound.

CHOICE MILLINERY BY EXPRESS.—The new and elegant Show Room lately added to Victoria House, is now replete with the very latest novelties in Trimmed and Untrimmed PARIS BONNETS, Hats, Shawls, Mantles and other fancy articles received yesterday by steamer from Europe.

REMOVED.—Mr Digby Palmer has removed to Kane street, three doors below Mr Fawcett's residence, where he will continue giving instruction on the Piano Forte, and singing. Evening parties attended and Pianos tuned and repaired.

LIVE STOCK.—The last Puget Sound arrivals have brought small freights of live stock, in anticipation, no doubt, of the reduction of the tariff on cattle and sheep that will ensue on the proclamation of union of the Colonies.

VICTORIA RIFLE CORPS.—Company drill—No. 1 Company, Monday at 8 p.m. No. 2 Company, Thursday at 8 p.m. Sword drill, Wednesday, at 8 p.m.—By order, J. Gordon Vinter, Lieut.-Adj.

Spicy breath, teeth white and speedless, Fragrant SOZODONT secures: Ladies, can you be so reckless As to fail to make them yours?

THE SHIP ROYAL TAR sailed yesterday morning from the outer harbor for Callao, Peru. She is laden with 500,000 feet of lumber for the Peruvian market.

KILLED DURING THE GERMAN WAR.—The names of sixteen Liberal Journals killed by the recent war are announced, and the list is said to be far from complete.

TREASURY SHIPMENT.—On Sunday the Bank of British North America shipped $148,512 52; the Bank of British Columbia, $91,556 43; Wells, Fargo & Co., $13,413 94.

THANKS.—To Mr I. V. Mossman, of the Salem (Oregon) Hotel, and Mr Crosby, purser of the Josie McNear, for files of late papers.

Mechanics' Institute. The following beautiful lines, recited by Mr W. K. Bull, on Monday evening, at the Mechanics' Institute, will be new to many of our readers. They appeared in the Australian papers on the occasion of a party starting in search of Dr Leichardt, who had been absent on an exploring expedition for eighteen months, without any tidings having been heard of him. They are the production of Mr Izard, who filled the position of Sergeant Barrack Master of the troops at that time:

1. Ye who prepare with pilgrim feet, Your long and doubtful path to wend, If whitening on the waste ye meet The relics of my murdered friend, His bones, with reverence ye shall bear, To where some mountain streamlet flows; There by his mossy bank prepare The pillow of his long repose.

2. It shall be, by a stream whose tides Are drunk by birds of every wing, Where every lowly flower abides The earliest waking touch of spring; Oh! meet that he who so careered, All beauteous nature's varied charms, That his mother's fondest arms, Within his mother's fondest arms.

3. When ye have made his narrow bed, And laid the good man's ashes there, Ye shall kneel down around the dead, And wait upon your God in prayer. What! though no reverend man be near, No anthem, pour its solemn breath, No holy walls invest his bier, With all the hallowed pomp of death,

4. Yet humble minds shall find the grace Devoutly bowed upon the sod, To call that blessing round the place Which consecrates the soul to God; And ye! the wilderness shall tell How faithful to the hopes of men The mighty Power he served so well, Shall breathe upon his bones again.

5. When ye, your gracious task have done, Heap not the rock above his dust, The Angel of the Lord alone Shall guard the ashes of the just; But ye shall heed, with pious care, The memory of that spot to keep, And note the marks that guide me where My virtuous friend is laid to sleep.

6. For oh! I bethink in other times, And be those happier times at hand, When science, like the smile of God, Comes brightening o'er that weary sand, How will her Pilgrims hail the Power, Beneath the drooping Myrtle's gloom, To sit at eve, and mourn an hour, And pluck a leaf on Leichardt's tomb.

A MOTHER ADMINISTERS POISON TO HER OWN CHILD BY MISTAKE.—The most disastrous case of accidental poisoning that we have been called upon to record for a number of years took place at Allegheny city on Monday night. The circumstances are as follows: For some time past an infant daughter of Mr Crawford, residing in Allegheny city, had been suffering from some disease peculiar to childhood. On Monday night the infant became very cross and peevish, and in order to quiet her Mrs Crawford despatched an older daughter up stairs for a bottle of Mrs Winslow's soothing syrup, that occupied place with a number of other vials of medicine on the bureau. The little girl returned and handed her mother a bottle containing, as they supposed, the syrup asked for. Mrs Crawford filled a large teaspoon with the medicine and gave it to the infant. The child became quiet immediately afterwards, and the mother deposited it in a crib. A few moments after she raised the child in her arms, but judge of her horror when she discovered that the form of the little one was cold and rigid, and that a clammy death sweat had gathered on its brow. She hastened immediately to where she had left the bottle from which she had taken the medicine, and found that instead of the harmless syrup she had given her child an immense dose of laudanum. Three physicians were sent for immediately, and their united efforts were used to restore the child to consciousness, but it was in vain. Death ensued in five hours after the narcotic had been administered.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

THE NATURALIST WATERLOO.—The late Chas. Waterloo, of Yorkshire, Eng., celebrated for once having ridden a crocodile, was a man of remarkable physical power and singular habits. It is related of him that when 77 years of age he scratched the back part of his head with the great toe of his right foot. The crocodile-riding was one of Mr Waterloo's humblest feats, for the brute had been caught by an immense hook nailed with raw flesh, and was being dragged along the river banks by a crowd of natives, when Mr Waterloo jumped astride him. Something akin to this, only much bolder, was his riding the Borneo orang-outang in the Zoological gardens in 1861. Think of an old gentleman seventy-eight years old, entering the cage of a ferocious ape, and while clinging in his embrace, studying the formation of its hands and teeth. At the same time he jumped over a fence three feet six inches high, without touching hand or foot. Mr Waterloo never in his whole life, drank wine, spirits or beer, delighting in very weak black tea. For 30 years he never slept in a bed, but found the hard boards a pleasant couch. Then he was perpetually bleeding himself, whenever he felt a tightness in his chest or any sort of illness, taking from himself as much as 16 or 20 ounces at a time, and letting the blood run until he felt quite comfortable, when he would bind up his arm himself as handsily as the cleverest surgeon. As for his fastings, they were severe to the last degree, exceeding the severest rules of the Romish church, and no remonstrances, either of priest or doctor, could ever induce him to diminish them. Yet he lived to be 83 years old.

LACE MADE BY CATERPILLARS.—A most extraordinary species of manufacture, which is in a slight degree connected with copying, has been contrived by an officer of engineers residing at Munich. It consists of lace and veils, with open patterns in them, made entirely by caterpillars. The following is the mode of proceeding: Having made a paste of the leaves of the plant on which the species of caterpillar he employs feed, he spreads it thinly over a stone, or rather flat substance of the size required. He then, with a camel's hair pencil dipped in olive oil, draws the pattern he wishes the insects to leave. The stone is then placed in an inclined position, and a considerable number of caterpillars are placed at the bottom. A peculiar species is chosen which spin a strong web; and the animals commence at the bottom, eating and spinning their way up to the top, carefully avoiding every part touched by the oil, but devouring every other part of the paste. The extreme lightness of these veils combined with some strength, is truly astonishing. One of them, measuring 26 1/2 inches by 17 inches, weighed only 1 1/2 grains.—Baltimore on the Economy of Machinery.

MR COBDEN'S FIRST SPEECH IN PARLIAMENT.—Mr Cobden entered the House of Commons in the year 1841, two years before I became a member of that House. I believe I was in the gallery of the House on the night when he made his first speech. I happened to sit close to a gentleman named Horow living—Horse—who had himself been a member of the House, but who was then occupied in the gallery writing the Parliamentary summary of the proceedings which was published morning after morning in the columns of the Times newspaper. Mr Cobden had a certain reputation when he went into Parliament from the course he had taken before the public in connection with the corn-law out of doors. There was great interest as to his first speech, and the position he would take in the House. Horace Twiss was a Tory of the old school. He appeared to have the greatest possible horror of anybody who was a member of the House, and he was down into that assembly to teach our senator wisdom. As the speech went on I watched his countenance and heard his observations; and when Mr Cobden sat down he threw it off with a careless gesture, and said: "Nothing in him; he is only a barker."—Mr Bright.

THIS IS THE WAY Mrs Smith advertised her husband: LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN.—An individual whom, in an urgent moment of loneliness, was thoughtless enough to adopt as my husband. He is a good looking and feeble individual, knowing enough, however, to come in when it rains, unless some good-looking girl offers him shelter of her umbrella; answers to the name of Jim; was last seen in company with Julia Harris, walking with his arm round her waist, up the plank road, looking more like a fool, if possible, than ever. Anybody who shall catch the poor fellow and bring him carelessly back, so that I can chastise him for running away, will be invited to tea by MARY F. SMITH.

THE PEOPLE'S FRIEND. PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.

The Greatest Family Medicine of the Age

Taken internally, it cures sudden colds, coughs, etc., weak stomach, general debility, nursery sore mouth, canker, liver complaint, dyspepsia or indigestion, cramp and pain in the stomach, bowel complaint, painters' colic, Asiatic cholera, diarrhoea, and dysentery.

APPLIED EXTERNALLY, cures felons, boils and old sores, severe burns and scalds, cuts, bruises and sprains, swollen joints, ringworm and tetter, broken breasts, frost-bitten feet and chilblains, toothache, pain in the face, neuralgia and rheumatism. It is a SURE REMEDY FOR AGUE AND CHILLS AND FEVER.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, strengthening the Nerves, restoring the Lost Appetite, FISH'S HAMBURG TEA.

It is the best preservative against almost any sickness, used timely. Composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. Full directions in English, French, Spanish, and German, with every pocket. TRIED BY FOR SALE at all the wholesale and retail drug stores and groceries.

EMIL FISCH, Wholesale Druggist, Sole Agent, 410 Clay St. San Francisco.

A New and Grand Epoch in Medicine.—Dr. Mason is the author of a most singular and valuable work, which has just appeared. The work is entitled, "The Human System, or the Human Machine, as it is called, and the various diseases which it is subject to, and the means of curing them." It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess. It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, strengthening the Nerves, restoring the Lost Appetite, FISH'S HAMBURG TEA.

It is the best preservative against almost any sickness, used timely. Composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. Full directions in English, French, Spanish, and German, with every pocket. TRIED BY FOR SALE at all the wholesale and retail drug stores and groceries.

EMIL FISCH, Wholesale Druggist, Sole Agent, 410 Clay St. San Francisco.

A New and Grand Epoch in Medicine.—Dr. Mason is the author of a most singular and valuable work, which has just appeared. The work is entitled, "The Human System, or the Human Machine, as it is called, and the various diseases which it is subject to, and the means of curing them." It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess. It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, strengthening the Nerves, restoring the Lost Appetite, FISH'S HAMBURG TEA.

It is the best preservative against almost any sickness, used timely. Composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. Full directions in English, French, Spanish, and German, with every pocket. TRIED BY FOR SALE at all the wholesale and retail drug stores and groceries.

EMIL FISCH, Wholesale Druggist, Sole Agent, 410 Clay St. San Francisco.

A New and Grand Epoch in Medicine.—Dr. Mason is the author of a most singular and valuable work, which has just appeared. The work is entitled, "The Human System, or the Human Machine, as it is called, and the various diseases which it is subject to, and the means of curing them." It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess. It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, strengthening the Nerves, restoring the Lost Appetite, FISH'S HAMBURG TEA.

It is the best preservative against almost any sickness, used timely. Composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. Full directions in English, French, Spanish, and German, with every pocket. TRIED BY FOR SALE at all the wholesale and retail drug stores and groceries.

EMIL FISCH, Wholesale Druggist, Sole Agent, 410 Clay St. San Francisco.

A New and Grand Epoch in Medicine.—Dr. Mason is the author of a most singular and valuable work, which has just appeared. The work is entitled, "The Human System, or the Human Machine, as it is called, and the various diseases which it is subject to, and the means of curing them." It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess. It is a most valuable work, and one which every person should possess.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, strengthening the Nerves, restoring the Lost Appetite, FISH'S HAMBURG TEA.

It is the best preservative against almost any sickness, used timely. Composed of herbs only, it can be given safely to infants. Full directions in English, French, Spanish, and German, with every pocket. TRIED BY FOR SALE at all the wholesale and retail drug stores and groceries.

EMIL FISCH, Wholesale Druggist, Sole Agent, 410 Clay St. San Francisco.

Auction Sales.

Thursday, Nov. 15th,

AT 11 O'CLOCK A. M.

J. A. M'CREA,

Has been instructed by

Mr E. C. HOLDEN, To Sell,

On the Premises,

Douglas st. bet. Courtenay and Humboldt,

ALL THE HOUSEHOLD

Furniture!

(Some of which is Nearly New)

Consisting of

Mahogany Sofa, Bedstead, Hair covered

Two large Mahogany Easy Chairs, Hair covered

Engravings, Chairs, Tables, Carpets

curtains, Cornices and Blinds

Mahogany Lounge, Hair covered

bedsteads, Mattresses, Bedding, &c.

Bureaus, Washstands, Wardrobes, Secretary, &c.

ooking Stove and Utensils, and the usual Kitchen Furniture

TERMS CASH.

Notice.

THE POWER OF ATTORNEY HELD

By Paria Carter to act on behalf of the undersigned,

Witness—George Perkins, Solicitor, Victoria, V.I.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

The Estate of William Henry Huskinson

IN BANKRUPTCY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO ALL parties indebted to the Bankrupt, that all accounts

Auction Sales.

Friday, November 16,

AT 11 O'CLOCK A. M.,

—IN FRONT—

OF SALESROOM

Wharf Street,

By order of the Assignee in the Estate of Henry Simpson, of Saanich.

ONE SPAN OF FIRST-CLASS

Draught Horses.

(Immediately after, in Salesroom)

Groceries,

Flour,

AND

Case Goods,

To close Consignments.

40 brls National Mills Flour in quarter bags

49 cases Crosse & Blackwell Pie Fruits

in 2 doz cases

—cases Family Tomatoes, 2 lbs tins, in 2 doz cases

—cases Cranberry Sauce, do in 2 doz cases

—cases Green Corn, do in 2 doz cases

4 cases 4 gross Yeast Powders

2 brls short shell Almonds

10 cases Pilot Bread

10 " Navy "

5 gunnies Green Corn

27 cases Brandy

TERMS AT SALE.

J. P. DAVIES & CO., Auctioneers.

New Advertisements.

S.T-1860-X.

A GREAT MANY SIDE HITS ARE being made at the Plantation Bitters, by a core of disinterested friends who have endeavored to state or counterfeited them. It's all of one sort. The people won't be long imposed upon. The Plantation Bitters are increasing in use and popularity every day, and "that's what's the matter." They are in same sized bottle and made just as they were at first, and will continue to be,

or we shall stop making them.

The Plantation Bitters purify, strengthen and invigorate. They create a healthy appetite. They are an antidote to change of water and diet. They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours. They strengthen the system and enliven the mind. They prevent malarial and intermittent fevers. They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation. They cure Headache, Cholera, and Cholera Morbus. They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.

They make the weak strong, the languid brilliant, and are exhausted nature's great restorer. The recipe and full Circular are around each bottle. Clergymen, Merchants and persons whose sedentary habits induce weakness, lassitude, palpitation of the heart, lack of appetite, distress after eating, liver complaint, constipation, &c., will find immediate and permanent relief in these Bitters; but above all, they are recommended to weak and delicate female and mothers.

The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, port and hamlet showing civilized nations. These matters try to come a near our name and style as they have, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. But on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

P. H. DRAKE & Co., Proprietors, New York City.

Sold by all Druggists, Grocers, Country Stores and dealers everywhere through the world.

G. LANGLEY & Co., Victoria, General Agents for the Colony

Over a Million Dollars Saved.

GENTLEMEN:—I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I used the Mexican Mustang

Liment. It soon effected a permanent cure."

Montgomery, Ala. June 17th, 1859. J. L. DOWNING.

"Take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scalds or Galls on Horses. Our men have used it for Burns, Bruises, Sores, Rheumatism, &c., and all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT, Foreman for American, Wells Fargo and Harnden's Express.

"The sprain of my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced to use your celebrated Mustang Liment."

ED SEELY Gloucester, Mass. August 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liment performs more cures in a shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, lawyers and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plated engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Deane & Harnden & Co. over it.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

New Advertisements.

New Book and Sheet Music, "BY 'ROYAL TAR.' J. BAGNALL & CO.

PIANO AND MUSIC SELLERS, "COOL" dental Building, Fort street. Pianos, Harmoniums and all sorts of Musical Instruments, Tuned, Repaired and let on hire. Book and Sheet Music and everything pertaining to the Music Business.

NEW CHURCH MUSIC BOOK. By L. O. EMERSON.

THE JUBILATE: A collection of SACRED MUSIC for Chorus, Singing Schools, Musical Conventions, &c. By L. O. Emerson, Author of the "Hymn of Gladness," "Golden Treasury," "Merry Chorus," &c. THE IMMENSE SUCCESS which has attended the "Hymn of Gladness" has induced the author to publish this new volume, which contains all the choicest features of his present work together with many new and important ones combine to produce a collection of music unequalled in merit, and suited to every capacity and occasion. This new book upon which Mr Emerson has bestowed much labor and care, cannot fail to be THE ONE BOOK SOUGHT FOR by Chorus and Congregations, Societies and Conventions, schools and Families.

TOTAL PRICE, $1 25; Wholesale Price, $12 a dozen. OLIVER DITSON & CO., Publishers, Boston.

Prize Medal Soap!

WE HAVE THIS DAY TRANSFERRED THE AGE OF Yardsley's Soaps to Langley & Co.

THESE SUPERIOR SOAPS, WHICH WERE AWARDED

Prize Medals

At the World's Fairs of 1851 and 1862, are specially adapted for use of

FAMILIES, HOTELS

AND STEAMBOATS.

And are now offered, both wholesale and retail, at the lowest rates, by

LANGLEY & CO., Chemists and Druggists, Yates street.

DAY & MARTIN'S REAL JAPAN BLANKING!

97, HIGH ROEBORN, LONDON!

For attaining nourishment and durability to the Leather it stands Unrivalled.

Sold by all First Class Houses in British Columbia and the Colonies

In Bottles and Tins at 6d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. each

CAUTION.—D. & M. take the opportunity of cautioning purchasers, against the imitations of their MANUFACTURERS and LABORS.

"Orders through Mercantile Houses in 10-12-14-16-18-20-22-24-26-28-30-32-34-36-38-40-42-44-46-48-50-52-54-56-58-60-62-64-66-68-70-72-74-76-78-80-82-84-86-88-90-92-94-96-98-100-102-104-106-108-110-112-114-116-118-120-122-124-126-128-130-132-134-136-138-140-142-144-146-148-150-152-154-156-158-160-162-164-166-168-170-172-174-176-178-180-182-184-186-188-190-192-194-196-198-200-202-204-206-208-210-212-214-216-218-220-222-224-226-228-230-232-234-236-238-240-242-244-246-248-250-252-254-256-258-260-262-264-266-268-270-272-274-276-278-280-282-284-286-288-290-292-294-296-298-300-302-304-306-308-310-312-314-316-318-320-322

